Another fine day – NOT. With the wind howling and the rain threatening to lash down (as it had earlier), six regular hashers and two virgins forced out by Culture Vulture (a cousin and her partner) collected on the beach in Guvercinlik. As it seemed that no-one else was going to brave the elements, CV called the Hashers to task at 2pm exactly. Lightfoot took the first home DOWN DOWN bravely before admitting as today's hare that he had cut the run a bit short because of the weather. Semen fell short of the RA again and CV stepped in with some ghastly blonde joke. Sam donned his goggles again – what are these for and what are they, diving goggles or flying goggles?? - then ON-ON was called.

A gentle climb through the woods. With only 8 out on the trail, CV was out in front again and so was Lightfoot as the hare even though he had been warned that the hares should be at the back – front runners don't need any help!! However, having said that, a lot of the trail had been washed away and Lightfoot did stay back at each check to see the back markers safely through or onto a short cut. Unfortunately, the cutting short of the run did make for a rather easy to follow right hander, but Lightfoot had put a good diversion into the ON-IN.

Back to the RV in fairly short time with all home within a very short time of each other – back markers strolling in via a short cut.

As the wind was howling again, CV called the circle promptly where the DOWN-DOWNS proceeded in fairly predictable fashion: hare; Virgin for doing one more run than the official total; Sam because he wanted one!; the 2 Virgins for being Virgins; most of the pack for short cutting; and everyone else in case they felt left out.

ON-ON-ON was at Hasan's place in Guvercinlik, but on the way everyone had to wait while Virgin and Kath stopped to collect a couple of carpets that had been dumped in the woods that they had seen on the run (short cut!).

The ON-ON-ON was good although the rain lashed down in the middle and everyone had to decamp from the landing stage to inside the restaurant.

No pictures again. CV will try to find his old digital camera for future runs although he won't be about for the next run as he will be in the UK celebrating his mum's 100th birthday – for which he deservedly got a DOWN DOWN!
